Ever wonder how a university and its faculty transform basic research into a commercial product? Or how a startup company forms around technology developed in a university research lab?

Find out at this upcoming Idea to Asset Seminar hosted by University of Arizona Health Sciences and Tech Launch Arizona.

Open to all UAHS faculty, researchers and students, this seminar will introduce intellectual property and commercialization concepts specific to academic investigators.

David Casimir and Robert Goetz from Casimir Jones will discuss specific examples of therapeutic and diagnostic technologies originally conceived at universities and successfully developed into commercial assets by successful startups.

Speaking on behalf of himself and team members Drs. May Khanna and Vijay Gokhale, Dr. Rajesh Khanna from the Department of Pharmacology will share their experiences in developing a therapeutic platform to treat pain, and working with TLA to protect their inventions and form a startup.

Lunch will be provided for all who RSVP in advance, so register now.
